STANDARDISATION OF NAMES OF SECURITIES ISSUED BY THE TREASURY OF ICELAND

It has been decided to standardise the names of the Treasury's domestic securities so as to co-ordinate them with usage in other countries. Instead of being called "Treasury bonds," the Treasury's indexed (inflation-linked) securities will be called "inflation-linked Treasury bonds." In English, the issuer will discontinue the use of the word "notes" for non-indexed (nominal) securities and will take up the term "nominal bonds." Over the next business days, the websites www.lanamal.is and www.bonds.is will be updated to reflect these changes. It is recommended that analysts and other market participants use this terminology.
